Seasons Greetings from Social Value Aotearoa!

As the year has flown by - was November a phantom month? - it's nice to sit now and reflect and recognize what a monumental year it has been for Social Value Aotearoa! After launching in Auckland in June we hosted our first networking event, Good Story, with Dawn Baggaley from NZ Post and Bikes in Schools and Julia Jackson from the Sustainable Business Network - this was a great chance to get together and spark up conversation in a NZ context.

In October we attended the international conference for Social Value, Critical Mass, representing New Zealand in London (which tied in perfectly with the Rugby World Cup). While there we were able to literally bump shoulders with some of the world's pioneering Social Value masterminds in the packed out and energetic plenary sessions and workshops.

We also have a brand new web series with thoughts, ideas and reflections on Critical Mass and the Social Value atmosphere around the world. And we even managed to nab Simon Faivel to record our first podcast in our new principles based podcast series: Talks for 10.

This month our Newsletter theme is Principle 2: Understand what changes. On the blog is an interesting reflection on this principle and as always we invite feedback and conversation so email or Tweet us with any questions or thoughts you might have.

We are looking forward to next year with NZ based SROI trainings coming up, joining in on some big events focussed on valuing outcomes and bringing you more content to get this conversation into action in our communities.

Happy Christmas, we hope you enjoy a well-deserved break, and thanks for making this an exciting and invigorating start to Social Value Aotearoa!
